ABOUT BBCB

The Black Brown & College Bound (BBCB) Summit at Hillsborough Community College has emerged as one of the preeminent national forums to address issues facing Black and Latino males in higher education. After twelve years, the summit has been successful in attracting some of the most influential national speakers and scholars to address the barriers that affect persistence and completion among minority males. A series of theme-based workshops on contemporary issues provide an important focus to the summit, bringing together college students and practitioners to engage in dialogue about critical issues, sharing successful strategies and best practices.

The highlight of the summit is the Dr. Sylvia Marion Carley Signature Luncheon located at the Tampa Convention Center. More than 1,200 comprise the audience of corporate sponsors, college administrators, students, staff and community leaders, in addition to state and national elected officials. With a message of national implication, the luncheon has attracted keynote speakers of international prominence including John Legend, General Colin Powell, Steve Harvey, Magic Johnson, Hill Harper and Michael Strahan.

BBCB has been featured in educational, diversity and media outlets such as Tampa Bay Times, Insight into Diversity, NPR, ABC Action News and Estrella TV to name a few. As a result of the success of the Black Brown & College Bound Summit, Hillsborough Community College was awarded the Advancing Diversity Award from the American Association of Community Colleges in April 2017, the highest diversity award among the nation's 1,200 community and technical colleges.

More than 150 colleges and universities from 40 states have attended the BBCB Summit since its inception. The significance of its message has also attracted corporate sponsorship from national companies including SunTrust Bank, Wells Fargo, Southwest Airlines, Spectrum Communications, Coca-Cola and Nielsen. The summit is also co-sponsored by more than a dozen colleges and universities across the nation.

The 13th Annual Black Brown & College Bound Summit will be held March 7-9, 2019, at the Tampa Waterside Marriott Hotel with the luncheon being held at the neighboring Tampa Convention Center.
